Course Description: "Strange Stories and Disturbing Narratives

This course examines texts that leave readers with questions about what happened or why it happened. Some are Gothic, or mysterious; others flirt with the strange or are simply in the strange or are simpl method of narrating the story. All of them leave the reader with doubt. Literature always aims to engage the reader's curiosity and imagination; these texts amplify the reader's role in interpreting what seems inexplicable.

The weekly course schedule consists of two hours of lecture and a third hour of tutorial discussion facilitated by a teaching assistant. In addition to providing an opportunity to discuss reading and lecture materials, tutorials will also provide substantial instruction in effective essay writing and research metho Il have completed the 1.0 credits in finstar English necessary to take senior courses in English.
