

 This paper was created as a required assignment for the CSD9639 Evidence Based Practice for Clinicians course at Western. While it has been evaluated by course instructors for elements of accuracy and style, it has not undergone formal peer-*

Although the study had a strong research design, the above concerns limit the validity of this research.

programs are ineffective at improving the oral health of residents living in long-term care facilities.

Supplemented In

- b. Appropriate and reliable outcome measures that directly assess oral health status;
- c. Identifying barriers affecting change in caregiver behaviour (e.g., background knowledge and education level of caregivers)