Health Science§624B- Social Determinants of Mental Health
Winter 2020

WARTED ESCRIPTION

In this course, we will discuss the interplay between social and personal determinants of mental health. We will also discuss the interrelatedness of mental disorder, social inequity, and both trauma and adversity in childhood.

More specifically:

According to the World Health Organization of mental health is integral to human health and well being". Similarly, the United Nations Human Rights Council statter of can be no health without mental health". Although the importance of 'good mental health' has risen to an unprecedented state of priority in health care systems all over the world, burdens resulting from compromised mental health, including personal, family, community, workplace, economic impacts, are increasing, worldwide. The serious impact for for adversity and social inequality, particularly in childhood and adolescence, on mental health in adulthood are now widely recognized as primary precursors to the occurrence of compromised mental health later in life. The design and delivery of cases, supports and treatments that are traumainformed, and that address various impacts imposed by individual, family, and community social inequity, is the new gold standard in mehtal-th care. In the School of Health Studies, each course instructor sets specific expectations for attendance and participation that are specific to the course, teaching objectives, leading outcomes.

Regular attendance is expected and essential for all courses, but particularly those that include participation grades in their evaluation schemes. Participation means not only attendance, but active engagement in the class, includi(fgr example) contribution to small and large group discussions, a demonstrated effort to prepare for class by completing assigned readings before class, and following the instructor's guidelines for use of electronic devices during class time. Studbotmics classes, or parts of classes, are responsible for the material they have missed. Instructors are not obliged to review the contents of missed lectures.

Persistent absenteeism may have serious repercussions, and may result in you failing this course. In this course, the equivalent of 3 weeks of unexcused absences, per term, will be considered to be persistent absenteeism. Persistent absenteeism will result in you being contacted by the instructor, who may request a meeting. Continued absence aftes point will be reported to the Undergraduate Chair, and may result in debarment from writing the final examination, and/or submitting the final course paper. In such a case, you would receive a grade of zero on the evaluations from which you warredleb

During Exams Unless you have medical accommodations that require you to do so, or explicit permission from the instructor of the course, you may not use any electronic devices during ANY tests, quizzes, midterm examinations, or other inclass evaluations.

During Lectures and Tutorials: Although you are welcome to use a computer during lecture and tutorial periods, you are expected to use the computer for scholastic purposes only, and refrain from engaging in any activities that may distract other students from learning. From time to time, your professor may ask the class to turn off all computers, to facilitate learning or discussion of the material presented in a particular class. Unless explicitly noted otherwise, you may not make audio or video recordings of lectures – nor may you edit, reuse, distribute, or rebroadcast any of the material posted to the course website.

Scholastic offences are taken seriously and students are directed to read the appropriate policy, specifically, the definition of what constitutes a Scholastic Offence, at the following Web site: http://www.uwo.ca/univsec/pdf/academic_policies/appeals/scholastic_discipline_undergrad.pdf
