3. Expectations

This upper-level course is structured to be responsive to students' backgrounds, interests, and existing creative practices, or curatorial, or, historical research areas. Students are expected to make a serious, sustained commitment to individual research, which includes viewing course lectures online, taking notes on readings, synthesizing all information and developing your project ideas over the course of the entire semester. Students should expect to spend 1 hour homework time, per week on this course (excluding class material review time).

All lectures and course materials, even when such lectures or materials are posted online, are the intellectual property of the instructor. Students are not to post lectures or lecture materials to any other websites or platforms or use the lecture recording or materials for any other purpose without Professor consent.

As course instructor, I expect to be consistently challenged to expand my knowledge and deepen my understanding of art and ecology. I offer to personalize each student's experience of the course by meeting with students outside of class and office hours when necessary for discussion and technical assistance.

4. Course Requirements

Each student is responsible for knowing the assignments, procedures, and due dates. Students are expected to complete all assignments by the due date; failure to do so may result in a failing grade (F). The writing shows originality and exhibits a high degree of critical engagement. Writing is probing through the use of comments and/or questions, and is clearly focused and logically organized. The quality of writing immediately engages the reader. Mastery of complex materials and ideas is demonstrated. The writing is of appropriate length, and demonstrates mastery of techniques so that results are meaningful and not simplistic. Regarding research, a majority of the secondary sources pertaining to the topic have been consulted and proper citation has been used.

The writing shows above average analysis, critical thinking and independent thought. Written claims are supported by ample evidence and the components of the topic are well-researched and presented. The work is addressed in reasonable depth and/or breadth and covers material appropriate to the course. Written analysis is organized around focal points and the development of the argument is easily followed. The writer demonstrates an above average ability to write in an intelligible style and to condense material meaningfully and with a concern for priorities of that material.
